TEENAGER CLAIMS TOP CARER AWARD

AN 18-year-old, who takes care of his two younger brothers despite the worry of his mum suffering from cancer, has won the Outstanding Achievement Award at the Haringey Carer of the Year ceremony.

George Onofrei, of Tottenham, helps to support his mum and stepfather, who both work long shifts, by taking his three-year-old brother to nursery on the bus every morning, as well as learning to bottle feed his baby brother and change his nappies.

Last year, George's mum Gabriela was diagnosed with terminal cancer while she was pregnant. Her baby was delivered early so she could undergo emergency surgery and start chemotherapy.

Despite the upheaval in his life, George has taken things in his stride to help out at home.

Mum Gabriela said: "George plays with both of his brothers and makes them laugh, even when he feels sad. His brothers love him so very much. He is quietly kind and cares deeply for us."

Along with Mayor of Haringey Sheila Peacock and several other councillors and high-ranking council officials, a host of adult and young carers were invited to the awards ceremony at Wolves Lane Nursery, in Wood Green, in recognition of the dedicated, unpaid work which they do to help relatives and other loved ones.

Speaking at the seventh annual staging of the event, the mayor told the audience: "I know that many of you here carry out your caring responsibilities out of sight."

"The Carer of the Year awards are our way of thanking and celebrating you and the thousands of unpaid carers in Haringey."

"This ceremony also aims to highlight your tremendous dedication and shows that you haven't been forgotten."

"I am truly astonished by the unwavering support you provide every single day, sometimes in very demanding situations."

"The remarkable thing is that many of you don't even realise just what an amazing job you do and how far you go beyond the norm. All of you deserve awards."

The Adult Carer of the Year accolade went to

Jay Ray Stephenson, of Tottenham, who gave up work to become a full-time carer to his mum, who has dementia.

Runners-up in that category were Dr Sarah White, of Stroud Green, and George Charalambous, of Harringay.

Dr White has been a long-time carer to her son, who has mental health problems, is an active member of MIND in Haringey and is also on the board of the Mental Health Support Association.

Mr Charalambous, 83, of Harringay Ladder, looks after his wife Christina, who is bed-bound due to osteoporosis.

The Young Carer of the Year is 12-year-old Fatna Khalid, of Wood Green, who helps her mum look after her older sister Zeineb.

Paying tribute to her youngest daughter, mum Meriem said: "Fatna is no ordinary girl. From as early an age as three, Fatna started looking out for her older sister and alerting me when Zeineb wandered off or was having difficulties."

"Fatna has always been ready to drop what she is doing to run to the help of Zeineb."

"What is more, at the end of last December, Fatna's patience and courage were put to a great test. Both Zeineb and I were not well for a period of six weeks between us."

"Fatna had to deal with the day-to-day shopping, cleaning, supporting Zeineb with her special feed and medication as well as physically helping her to move about."

"For several weeks, Fatna had to give up her free time and even her room as she had to sleep with us in the sitting room because we could not manage the stairs."

"Fatna did all the above and much more with such commitment, courage and endurance without ever complaining or forgetting to smile."

There were also two runners-up in the Young Carer category - Sean Malik-Williams, 17, and Zahra Dehbi, 16, both of Hornsey.

Sean helps to look after his seven-year-old brother as his mum works long hours, while Zahra has cared for her mum Ayshe, who has a blood disorder and suffers from depression, for many years.

Four charged with murder of man, 20

FOUR people have appeared in court charged with the murder of Ibrahim Ali in Tottenham earlier this year.

The 20-year-old, right, from Tottenham, died in hospital after he was found by police and paramedics suffering from knife wounds in Stamford Close, just off Broad Lane, at about 5am on March 10.

Detectives investigating the former Park View Academy pupil's death and the attempted murder of another man, made four arrests last week.

Last Wednesday, Rhys Brown, 20, of Craven Park Road, South Tottenham, Chez Degoze, 27, of Coleridge Road, Finsbury Park, and Tara Phillips, 32, from Hoddesdon, Hertfordshire, appeared at Hendon Magistrates' Court charged with the murder of Mr Ali and the attempted murder of a 20-year-old man.

Phillips also charged with perverting the course of justice.

On Thursday, a 17-year-old boy from north London appeared at Willesden Youth Court on the same charges.

All four have been remanded to appear in court at a future date.

Crack house shut down

POLICE have been granted a closure order for a crack house in Thackeray Avenue, in Bruce Grove.

The three-month order was granted following reports of persistent antisocial behaviour at the property. A police raid this month unearthed evidence of class A drugs being used at the house.

Council boosts highways budget by £9.5m

HARINGEY Council has pledged to spend an extra £9.5million on improving roads and street lighting across the borough this year.

At a meeting of the cabinet on Tuesday last week, the council announced a highways budget of £16.26m for 2013/14, up from £6.7m last year.

It comes on the back of the council last month pledging an extra £1.5m to deal with potholes across the borough.

In April, Haringey's Liberal Democrat group opposition slammed the state of pavements and roads across the borough. The Lib Dems claimed that more than half of footpaths needed repairing and there was a £107m backlog of investment required to bring Haringey's roads and transport infrastructure up to scratch.

The council has reacted by pledging the extra cash to repair roads damaged by the cold winter and spring weather, as well as plans to improve Wood Green, Tottenham and the Green Lanes corridor.

What's been said...and by whom

Liz Wise, Enfield Clinical Commissioning Group's chief officer:

"Preventing the changes to emergency care puts local people at risk. These changes mean more senior emergency doctor hours in A&E, better maternity care in modern labour wards and improved children's inpatient services.

"As part of the clinical strategy we are recruiting more than 250 staff to work in these larger departments. However, it is not just about more staff, as senior doctors maintain and improve their skills by working in larger departments, treating a greater range of patient conditions.

"At the same time, many of the services at Chase Farm will continue – outpatients, blood and other diagnostic tests, rehabilitation and a new urgent care centre. Chase Farm Hospital will also specialise in planned operations with six operating theatres. There will also be assessment centres, one for children and another for older people.

"The clinical strategy is also about sustaining the local medical workforce and hospital services. All local hospitals will have the opportunity to carry on teaching and contributing to research – providing high quality care for local people."

Alev Cazimoglu, chairwoman of Enfield Council's health and well-being scrutiny panel:

"The report we received showed that work still needs to be done to improve primary care in Enfield prior to the potential closure of any facilities at Chase Farm Hospital so that we can be sure that patients have access to high quality healthcare in this borough which meets their needs.

"We are very pleased with the quality of the report produced by Hygeian and Enfield Council will continue to monitor the quality of primary care provision ahead of the decision by the NHS in September on whether or not to remove the maternity and A&E departments at Chase Farm Hospital from November.

"Both the public and members of the panel expressed serious concerns relating to the population figures the NHS have been using to calculate future need, ambulance provision in Enfield, transportation issues and the difficulty our consultants had in obtaining information from the NHS in putting together their report."

Kate Wilkinson, from the Save Chase Farm campaign:

"The NHS did not predict the population explosion that has occurred in Enfield. This is already putting strain on both acute hospital services and primary care provision and without front-line services at Chase Farm the situation would become dangerous with the population increase set to continue.

"The NHS has failed to deliver the improved primary care and other community facilities promised under this strategy and has failed to provide the additional ambulance cover promised following the last legal challenge.

"They have also failed to acknowledge the need for additional maternity facilities at Barnet and Chase Farm Hospital sites. Chase Farm is set to lose its consultant-led maternity wing in November at a time when demand continues to increase and Barnet Hospital is closed on a regular basis.

"For these and many other reasons it would be dangerous to proceed with the planned closures at Chase Farm in November."

Enfield's MPs:

"The council requested this report as an alternative to pursuing a judicial review of the final decision to downgrade A&E at Chase Farm" – Nick de Bois (Enfield North). "At the time they made it clear that if the conditions were not being met they would seek a judicial review and fight the decision in the courts. I urge them to deliver on that commitment and I would support them wholeheartedly.

"The fact is the report highlights a number of areas where primary care is not good enough. Progress with the four health centres has been slow and too many GP practices are in sub-standard premises. It's highly unlikely this will be remedied by the November deadline and therefore it's clear the council has to go for a judicial review now."

"Unfortunately, the strategy does little to reassure me the NHS is on track to achieve the smooth transition to the new community-focused health system my constituents need and deserve" – Andy Love (Edmonton). "Questions remain about whether or not the four new primary care centres, including Highmead in Edmonton, will be opened on time.

"I fear that the success of the proposed system hinges on too many variables that, according to this report, are simply not in place yet. The whole future of the strategy must be in doubt as a result of the failure to deliver on some of the key components of the plan."

Health chiefs under fire over new Chase Farm report

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

HEALTH commissioners were taken to task by councillors and health campaigners on Monday over plans to downgrade Chase Farm following an independent report into the changes.

At a meeting of Enfield Council's health and well-being scrutiny panel, councillors and campaigners tackled representatives of the Enfield Clinical Commissioning Group over the implementation of the Barnet, Enfield and Haringey Clinical Strategy, which will see services removed from Chase Farm Hospital, in The Ridgeway, Enfield, in November.

The report, compiled by healthcare consultancy Hygeian Consulting, revealed that five out of 16 recommendations made by the Independent Reconfiguration Panel, made up of clinicians, managers and independent members, who reviewed the strategy in 2008 and 2011, have not been met.

Following the removal of A&E and maternity services at Chase Farm, patients will be sent instead to North Middlesex University Hospital, in Sterling Way, Edmonton, or Barnet Hospital. Some patients with minor injuries could be treated at a new urgent care centre at Chase Farm, for which £12million has been allocated. However, building work will not be completed until early 2014.

In 2008, the IRP laid out the recommendations relating to services including primary care, transport between hospitals and ambulance provision, as well as further investments that needed to be in place before services would be taken away.

Still campaigning: Kieran McGregor, of the Save Chase Farm group

The Hygeian report noted a failure to bolster primary care services in the borough, a massive growth in population numbers higher than originally predicted and a lack of information made available to consultants working on the report by health officials.

While the CCG said it would be boosting primary care services with a £5million investment over the next two years, back in 2011, Enfield Council had told the IRP that community services were badly underfunded.

At the time, the council estimated that the borough had a shortfall of £70m based on relative levels of deprivation, if compared to the similar borough of Ealing, in west London.

And at Monday's panel, Liz Wise, chief officer of Enfield CCG, appeared to be questioning the relationship between the development of primary care in Enfield and the clinical strategy.

She told the meeting: "We are confident that by September we will be complying with the IRP recommendations and we will look at that as a programme board every time we meet."

"But it is quite important to note that the hospital strategy is not directly related to the developments in primary care."

"Around 40 per cent of people accessing Chase Farm A&E can still receive treatment there, at the new urgent care centre."

"The remaining 60 per cent will be looked after at Barnet Hospital or North Middlesex University Hospital, and we are not assuming these people will go into primary care."

Kieran McGregor, of the Save Chase Farm campaign, said: "It is clear in my mind that there has always been a link between the development of primary care before services would be removed – alternative services would have to be available in the community."

"The CCG are now moving the goalpost and seem to be sidestepping the conditions which they have promised to meet. The report itself shows that the recommendations of the IRP have not been met and therefore we are calling on politicians to demand an immediate halt to the downgrade."

What the report said...

"While the BEH Strategy clearly includes the parallel development of primary care services and reconfiguration of acute hospital services, there is no specific reference to which aspects of one component are directly dependent on which aspects of the other"

"With regard to maternity services, the NHS has yet to confirm that the planned capacity at Barnet and North Middlesex is for 13,000 births and that this will be sufficient for the needs of the significantly increased population"

"Progress on the four new primary care centres has been slower than originally anticipated and the contract for the Ordnance Road development had not been signed at the time of the review"

The timeline to hospital downgrade

1990s: Closure of Highlands General Hospital, St Michael's Geriatric Hospital, the Enfield War Memorial Hospital and the South Lodge Infectious Diseases Hospital, all in the Enfield area.

2004: Healthy Hospitals was a precursor to the Barnet, Enfield and Haringey Clinical strategy, led by the Barnet and Chase Farm Hospital Trust. It was officially dropped in January 2006.

September 2006: Ten options for the future of healthcare in Barnet, Enfield and Haringey, are drawn up by the joint Primary Care Trust project team, whittled down to four scenarios by the end of the month.

June to October 2007: Public consultation on the clinical strategy, which was extended by 12 days, on two options, both downgrading accident and emergency as well as maternity services, but one allowing planned care to remain at Chase Farm Hospital.

December 2007: The three primary care trust boards meet separately and each approve adoption of closure of A&E and maternity services, but keeping planned care at the hospital.

March 2008: Barnet, Enfield and Haringey Joint Health Scrutiny Committee referred the decision to the Secretary of State for Health Alan Johnson, who commissioned the Independent Reconfiguration Panel to re-examine the plans.

September 2008: Secretary of State for Health Alan Johnson signs off clinical strategy after Independent Reconfiguration Panel approve the plans' albeit 16 recommendations.

April 2009: Enfield Council's judicial review into the Health Secretary's decision to downgrade Chase Farm is thrown out. A high court judge ruled that it would only take the process back to December 2007 because the challenge was "misconceived".

May 2010: New Conservative Secretary of State for Health Andrew Lansley calls a halt to all downgrades and sets a four-point test for all reconfigurations to meet, including support of local clinicians.

December 2010: The Strategic Co-ordination Group made up of clinicians in north London find that the clinical strategy meets the four tests set out by Mr Lansley.

March 2011: Enfield Council is asked to draw up plans for the hospital and opt for the status quo and more NHS funding for the borough, which prompted a second Independent Reconfiguration Panel review.

September 2011: Health Secretary Andrew Lansley approves the downgrade, saying the safety and sustainability of local NHS services have to be the priority for all involved and as the IRP advice makes plain, both are at significant risk unless decisions are taken.

December 2011: Enfield Council chooses not to pursue a judicial review into Mr Lansley's decision, saying it would be "premature". The council says it will commission a review of the current service provision at Chase Farm and in primary care before the downgrade commences.

January 2013: Business cases for the clinical strategy are approved, with £80million given to North Middlesex University Hospital to refurbish its tower block and create a women and children's centre – and £23m is given to Barnet Hospital for new wards and extra parking spaces.

May 2013: Hygeian Consulting report back to Enfield Council with their findings that primary care has not been bolstered as recommended by IRP and says the NHS is yet to confirm that expansion plans for maternity services at North Mid and Barnet will be sufficient.

Former MP Ryan wins her fight to stand again

Back in the running: Joan Ryan has been selected to stand for Labour in Enfield North – three years after losing the seat at the last general election

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

FORMER Enfield North MP Joan Ryan has been selected as the Labour Party's candidate for her old constituency at the next general election.

Ms Ryan, who served as MP between 1997 and 2010, was voted the prospective parliamentary candidate by party members at a hustings at Kingsmead School, in Southbury Road, Enfield, on Sunday.

She defeated four other candidates on the all-woman shortlist – Enfield councillors Jayne Buckland and Ayfer Orhan, Hackney's cabinet member for neighbourhoods Feryal Demirci and Annajoy David, an entrepreneur, from Ilford, east London, who was backed by trade union Unite.

Ms Ryan told the Advertiser: "I am absolutely delighted with the support I have received and I am looking forward to starting the real work of campaigning.

"Enfield residents are being hit hard by this government's policies. Our hospital is slowly being closed despite the fact that there has not been enough investment in primary care services to compensate for this.

"Furthermore, public health spending is very low, there is a huge shortage of school places and there are 3,500 people in Enfield looking for work.

"These issues will be my priority during the campaign and we should start this work now."

The leader of Enfield Council, Doug Taylor, said: "In selecting Joan Ryan, local members of the Labour Party have taken the next step in ensuring that Enfield North elects an MP who will listen to local people, work hard for them and stand up for our area."

Ms Ryan has proved to be a divisive figure in the borough in recent weeks, with a faction of party activists launching an initiative called Labour Renewal in Enfield last week.

Supporters of the initiative urged Labour members to vote for Ms Orhan, Ms David or Ms Demirci.

Vicki Pite, chairwoman of Enfield North Labour Party and a supporter of Labour Renewal, told the Advertiser: "Obviously, I am disappointed with the selection as I was one of the many activists who felt we needed a fresh start.

"But we are a democratic party and our members have made a choice. Personally, I will continue to campaign for renewal in politics because I think that the electorate will demand nothing less."

Police line up contact points for public

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

THE first port of call for people in need of their friendly local bobby could be a supermarket, as of September.

Plans to boost the importance of safer neighbourhood policing will see four points of contact in the borough for people wanting to get in touch with police.

These will be located at North Middlesex University Hospital, in Sterling Way, Edmonton, Morrison's supermarket, in Aldermans Hill, Palmers Green, at Southgate Patrol Base, in Chase Side, Southgate, and at the Turkey Street Safer Neighbourhood Base, in Hertford Road.

In order to press ahead with the changes, Southgate police station will lose its front office and be replaced by a contact point for members of the public.

As reported previously in the Advertiser, the only front counter services to remain in the borough will be at Edmonton police station, which will be open throughout the day and night, and Enfield police station, which will be open for just 40 hours a week.

The changes are due to be rolled out in September and a spokeswoman for Enfield Police told the Advertiser that further details of the shape of neighbourhood policing in the borough will emerge closer to the autumn launch date.

Part of the plans, which will be expanded London-wide, include changing the way crimes are reported to police and will mean that victims can make an appointment at a time that suits them with a local police officer.

Safer neighbourhood teams are also being shaken up and they will now be responsible for investigating neighbourhood crime and tackling anti-social behaviour and they will also be making a concerted effort to make their presence felt later into the evenings and at weekends.

Hailing the plans as evidence City Hall is putting "bobbies before building", London's deputy mayor for policing Stephen Greenhalgh said: "Moving 2,600 extra police officers into neighbourhoods provides a golden opportunity for the Met to reconnect with Londoners."

Changing: Southgate police station is losing its front counter, which will be replaced by a contact point

School expansion gets the go-ahead

By Koos Couvée

ENFIELD Council has approved the second phase of its primary school expansion programme, which will lead to the borough's first two all-through schools.

The council's cabinet agreed to a £44million investment on Wednesday last week in order to deliver an additional 1,680 places as part of phase two of the programme, increasing the number of new primary school places to 4,000 by September 2017.

The money comes on top of the £22m in phase one, which was approved in December.

ARK John Keats Academy opens its doors in Bell Lane, Enfield Wash, in September – on the site of the former Oasis Hadley school, with places for 60 reception children.

Edmonton County School, in Bury Street, Edmonton, is being expanded to include primary-age children and is scheduled to admit a 30-strong reception class from January next year.

Cabinet member for children and young people Ayfer Orhan said: "This is good news as we are working hard with our partners to ensure there are enough primary school places in the areas where we need them the most."

"Edmonton County and ARK John Keats are embracing the all-through school concept which helps to meet the primary school demands and enables children to make a smooth transition between each phase of their education."

Dr Susan Tranter, headteacher at Edmonton County, said: "We are a school for local children and we look forward to providing an outstanding education for children aged four to 19."

Opening in September: ARK John Keats Academy in Bell Lane, Enfield Wash

"As children approach the end of Year 7 they will have the opportunity to be taught by specialists in subject-specific facilities. This is a unique opportunity in a council school."

Speaking after last week's cabinet meeting Michael Lavender, leader of the Conservative group, told the Advertiser: "During the consultation on the first phase of the programme we have seen how many people are concerned about the impact on traffic and parking availability in their areas when schools grow."

"The council needs to assess how this will pan out when expanded schools reopen."

The cabinet report also acknowledged that secondary schools will have to be expanded as the projected influx of academies and free schools will not meet the growing demand for places over the coming years.

Dire consequences for residents if budgets cut

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

COUNCIL chiefs have issued a stark warning that slashing local government budgets could have dire consequences for residents.

The warning has come after a week of widespread speculation that in today's comprehensive spending review chancellor of the exchequer George Osborne will announce that the Department of Communities and Local Government, who are responsible for allocating local authority budgets, have accepted a crippling cut of ten per cent to their budget.

Although town halls also receive income from council tax and business rates leader of the council Doug Taylor, has warned that the level of budget trimming the government are proposing could cripple local authorities, not just in Enfield, but across the county.

Speaking ahead of today's review he told the Advertiser that already council budgets were being squeezed by a lethal combination of a reduction in grant allocation, an unprecedented population increase and a freeze in council tax.

"You can't keep making substantial cuts without them having a substantial impact," the leader said. "At the minute we are working very hard to stop the cuts being felt on the front line. But in the longer term the reality is that things are going to get harder and harder."

Explaining that in real terms the bite

out of Enfield's budget could be in the region of £8million he warned: "Protecting front-line services in the borough will become increasingly difficult."

Neither the Department of Communities and Local Government nor the Treasury would comment before today's official announcement.

COMMENT

Health services looking unwell

ENFIELD Clinical Commissioning Group's answers to questions at the scrutiny meeting earlier this week gave very little re-assurance to campaigners deeply concerned about the future of local health services in Enfield.

The publication of a report commissioned by the council into the clinical strategy which will see A&E and maternity services removed from Chase Farm Hospital in November, has found solid patient data lacking, substandard small GP practices, underestimated population projections and uncompleted primary care centre plans.

The fact that our local health commissioners are now saying that the reconfiguration of acute care can take place independent of what happens in primary and community care, is alarming, and contrary to what the Independent Reconfiguration Panel concluded back in 2008 and every chief executive spear-heading these plans, and there have been many, promised over the years.

Improved primary care services are meant to stop unnecessary admissions to the fewer A&E departments we will be left with, but still no evidence of additional doctors or appointment availability can be found. Furthermore, there is little evidence that other recommendations, including improved transport links between hospitals and the provision of two additional ambulances in the borough, will be in place by November.

The CCG assures the people of Enfield that all will be well, but who is really convinced?

All in all, it is very clear that the conditions set by health chiefs themselves and highlighted by panels of experts called in to review the plans will not be met before the November deadline.

And as it appears the CCG is convinced that the downgrade will go-ahead regardless whether suitable replacement services are in situ.

If anyone has a chance of stopping these plans now it is the politicians of Enfield. It is up to them to lobby Health Secretary Jeremy Hunt, he is the only one with the power to halt this downgrade, and convince him that the preparation has not been done, and ultimately lives will be put at risk if Chase Farm is closed in five months time.

Getting a doctor's appointment is a real pain

I WAS surprised when reading in the Advertiser (Letters, June 12) about the difficulty of getting an appointment with a doctor, as I thought I was the only one having that problem.

People have to start phoning from 8.30am but the line is already busy.

You hang on waiting to get through only to be told that all appointments have been taken and to ring back at noon. When ringing at the dot of 12 o'clock, you are told the same thing.

When asking if I could make an advance appointment, I was told that I would have to wait for two weeks.

Unfortunately, I could not wait that long but was told that I would have come to come in and wait. At the age of 82, I cannot wait in a queue in pain.

I then asked if I could see any doctor who was available but that was not possible.

I began to wonder why whenever I phone to see a doctor, this cannot be arranged even though it is not very often that I do want to see one?

I had no choice but to become a private patient – but not everyone can afford this. Neither can I but my health comes first so I had to sacrifice something else.

I bet there are many more people out there in the same boat and I hope that now some of us have put pen to paper that something will be done.

Imposing 20mph zones is not always necessary

RE: "Put residents first and traffic second" (Letters, Advertiser, June 12), David Hughes and Bill Linton make odd statements in support of their campaign for 20mph speed limits.

Where are all the people afraid to walk along the street? Where are the fortress houses?

I have lived in Palmers Green for 40 years and have not been aware of anything abnormal.

It is not possible to put residents first and traffic second because most residents, including Mr Hughes, own a car and create the traffic.

Most of us have accepted that 30 million cars now take precedence but it does not inhibit relations with neighbours.

I do not believe children are less independent because of the car. They still walk to school and use public transport or parents' cars to get there.

I agree that 20mph is a less harmful speed than 30mph but it is not necessary on every residential road.

The council keeps a record of traffic accidents and the number of incidents should determine the need for 20mph.

Mr Linton quotes percentages to compare the difference between 30mph and 20mph. They would be better understood if numbers were added.

He also wishes to remind motorists that roads are not provided for short cuts. I would like to remind him that roads are provided for the passage of motor vehicles and owners pay a high price for using them. Pavements are provided for pedestrians.

Some of us are working on behalf of residents

MY letter (Advertiser, May 29) was about the fact that Enfield residents need more jobs, school places, green spaces, housing and social services – a fairly obvious and uncontentious statement for anyone who doesn't live in cloud cuckoo land.

Instead of simply agreeing, however, what your paper got was an unhinged letter from Tory councillor Martin Prescott (June 12), who not only came up with a bizarre theory denying the reality of Enfield's terrible housing crisis – caused in part by his government's "soak the poor" policies – but which went on to assert that, notwithstanding the numbers, there are more jobs locally than there are unemployed.

Have Enfield's Tories fallen so low they deny the existence of problems instead of trying to address them?

I don't know what world Mr Prescott lives in but he should calm down and join the rest of us who are actually trying to do things on Enfield residents' behalf.

Lastly, I note that Mr Prescott's fellow Conservative councillors have written to your paper in support of the housing being built in Chase ward.

Maybe he should consult with before putting words in my mouth.

OPINION

Don't give up hope on CPZ

RE: "We opposed CPZ but it's still being bulldozed through, say residents" (Advertiser, June 19).

The council tried the same ruse at the top of Wynchgate some years ago saying that the majority supported the CPZ. But I obtained enough signatures to stop this.

I suggest to Mike Webster speaks to people living in the lower part of Wynchgate as to the problems it caused, apart from other residents using the parking spaces outside their homes.

I am sure he could obtain enough signatories to cancel the CPZ for the lower part of Chelmsford Road.

Mike Dehaan

Sunk without good reason

I HAVE been using Enfield swimming facilities for almost 30 years.

In that time, I have never encountered the excuse used for closing the Southgate pool at 5.45pm on June 7 without prior notification.

It was due to lack of trained staff. This is a wholly unacceptable way to run these facilities on behalf of residents.

So, I would like to ask:

● Who monitors Fusion's performance? And how is that carried out?

● What are their targets?

● What are the consequences of failure?

● Are they just there to make money from the gyms?

Petition calls for halt to care staff changes

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlnews.co.uk

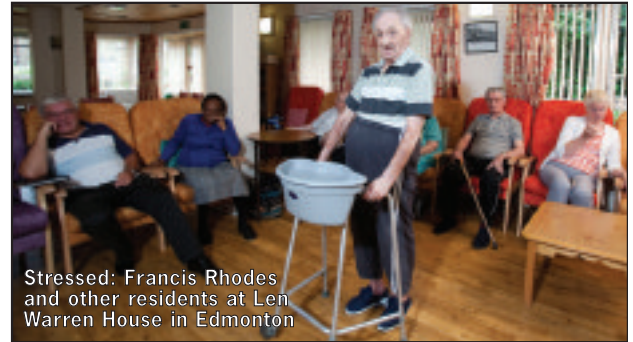

SHELTERED housing residents and their relatives are up in arms over plans to replace full-time staff with agency workers.

Last month, Enfield Council informed residents of proposals to introduce personalised care packages as well as bringing in agency workers in place of full-time carers, at Dean House, in Archers Drive, Enfield Highway, Newstead House, in Maldon Road, Edmonton, and Len Warren House, in St James Road, Edmonton.

The plans are not subject to a consultation process and last week relatives and friends started a petition calling on the council to call a halt because of the impact they say the changes will have on the physical and mental health of residents.

Stan Kelby, 68, a friend of Francis Rhodes, 84, a resident of Len Warren House, told the Advertiser: "The experiences of people I know with agency staff have been very negative. People here know the carers and they always go the extra mile for the residents. With agency staff there will be different carers all the time, and we all know that their attitudes to work will be different. "Francis has lost a lot of weight over the past few weeks and many other residents are suffering because of the stress this is causing them. It is really affecting everyone's feelings of security and confidence."

Vince Cox, whose mother Elsie, 97, lives in Newstead House, said: "The whole personalisation agenda will fragment care. Surely it would be cheaper and easier for everyone if people get their meals all at the same time, as opposed to everyone individually paying for every little thing the carers need to do, such as picking up papers in the morning?"

Don McGowan, the council's cabinet member for adult services, care and health, said: "Personalisation is a national initiative transforming adult social care and choice. As part of a review of our services, we received positive feedback, but the service is not the same across all tenancies and it is financially unsustainable compared to similar services.

"We are in the process of setting individual budgets, according to need, to ensure that we get the support levels right. It is at the moment impossible to say how much saving will be achieved. Residents are currently being assessed to determine their weekly care packages. The changes will come into effect in August."

Setting Standards at Enfield Council Do you want to play your part in setting high ethical standards in Enfield?

As an Independent Person, you can!

Local authorities have a duty to promote and maintain high standards of conduct among their councillors and co-opted members. Recent changes include the introduction of Independent Persons to advise and support the Council in relation to the conduct of its members.

To be an Independent Person, you should have a keen interest in standards in public life plus a knowledge and understanding of local government or other public sector organisations. You must be able to advise and assist on decisions on councillor conduct issues. You should also be able to demonstrate an independent and analytical mind and possess tact and good interpersonal skills. Training will be provided and an allowance paid.

It is important that you are truly independent of the Council. Therefore, you must not be an employee of the authority, or be related directly to an employee or Enfield councillor. It is essential that you do not hold any political office, belong to any political party; or have been politically active in the last five years. You should also not have an unspent criminal record. Selection will be through interview.

FOCUS ON WINCHMORE HILL

With a rich and varied history and a real village feel, Winchmore Hill is at once idyllic and urban

The area is superbly connected, with regular trains running to Moorgate in the City of London providing ideal commuter links. Conveniently located, it provides the perfect getaway from the chaos of the city. Winchmore Hill's history dates back to pre-Roman times with records indicating that before occupation by the Romans it was once a settlement of the Belgian Catuvellauni tribe. Early records of the area date to the 14th century, when the village was known as Wynsermerhull, Old English for Wysienge's Boundary Hill.

Boasting many cultural peculiarities, not least St Paul's Church featuring what was once the largest unsupported plaster ceiling in Europe (although renovations in the 1960s revealed previously unknown hidden supports), Winchmore Hill has a rich and varied roster of cultural oddities. The Green Dragon Pub in Green Lanes dating back to 1726 once had a gallows outside which was used to hang highwaymen.

Today, the area remains one of the most vibrant in the borough with highly attractive Winchmore Green boasting a wide range of superb shops, restaurants and pubs. It is perhaps no surprise that the village has attracted a raft of famous residents. Arsenal footballer Cesc Fabregas, former S Club Seven singer Rachel Stevens and the television personality Melanie Sykes all have homes in the area.

Poison fears over North Circular fumes

By Ruth McKee
ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

TOXIC fumes churned out by traffic along one of the busiest roads in the borough are slowly poisoning residents, according to a report published this week.

The North Circular Road, that stretches through the south of the borough from Bowes Park to Edmonton, has been named the most polluted road in London.

The Mayor of London's office released figures for diesel exhaust fumes for every major road in London following pressure from anti-pollution campaign group Clean Air in London. The report reveals that in the space of one year 12.2 tonnes of diesel fumes were pumped out per kilometre along the road.

Speaking to the Advertiser the day after the report had been published, Simon Birkett, founder and director of the campaign group, said that statistics reveal 6.6 per cent of deaths in Enfield are attributable to long-term exposure to toxic pollutants in the atmosphere.

The Green Party in Enfield has also raised concerns over the damage wreaked by the toxic chemicals and campaigner for Bowes ward Laura Davenport told the Advertiser: "There are currently plans to build blocks of flats six storeys high along that road and that will actually trap the pollution on that corridor."

The report also states that the data proves pollution levels have not fallen as London mayor

Boris Johnson had predicted they would.

However, a spokeswoman for Mr Johnson said: "Strenuous efforts are being made to improve air quality in the capital and the mayor constantly reviews new measures to target the most polluted roads.

"The mayor has tightened regulations on vehicles in the low emission zone, one of many changes that have resulted in emissions of dangerous particulates falling by 15 per cent and of oxides of nitrogen by 20 per cent."

Residents lead fightback over the closure of level crossing

No through road: The level crossing in Lincoln Road, Bush Hill Park, has been closed to traffic since last December

RESIDENTS in Bush Hill Park have called on Enfield Council to take action against Network Rail following a decision to permanently close a railway crossing to traffic.

People living in and around Lincoln Road presented a petition at the council's cabinet meeting last week against the closure of the level crossing.

The group told councillors that trade for local businesses had been reduced as a result of the closure, congestion in Southbury Road had increased and there were daytime access problems for emergency vehicles.

Adele Panayi, of Nags Head Road, Ponders End, and a member of Southbury Conservatives, said: "We need the council to stand up to Network Rail, to point out the huge negative effect on residents that the closure has already had and to challenge their arguments for closure.

"Network Rail's national policy is to close all such crossings and if they are not challenged now the residents of Green Street and Enfield Lock may also find their crossings subject to closure in the future as well."

Chris Bond, cabinet member for environment, said: "Network Rail have disregarded their own procedures by closing the crossing without consultation. We have several level crossings in Enfield and if they close all of them it will be a disaster for residents.

"We have invited them to a meeting in which they can explain themselves."

A spokeswoman for Network Rail said the crossing had been closed following ongoing safety concerns. It has not been reopened since it was closed in December.

"The level crossing is open to pedestrians and a further study is being carried out looking into improving the pedestrian facilities for crossing the railway in this area," she added.

Tear gas and water cannon – one man's experience of

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

THE protests that have engulfed Turkey over the past few weeks have also sent waves through the borough's Turkish community – and prompted some to join the movement demanding political change from Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan's government.

The largest public demonstrations the country has witnessed in decades started on May 28 when police armed with tear gas evicted a peaceful sit-in at Istanbul's Taksim Gezi Park, causing outrage in cities across the country.

The demonstrators had occupied the park in protest against government plans to demolish Gezi – one of the few green spaces in that part of Istanbul – to make way for a shopping mall and a mosque.

The protests intensified and quickly spread to other Turkish cities, where a new media-savvy social movement has sprung up.

The continuing unrest has triggered a ferocious reaction from Mr Erdogan, whose party has mobilised hundreds of thousands of supporters at a string of rallies backing his Justice and Development Party (AKP).

Kerem Nisancioglu, 29, of Hamilton Crescent, Palmers Green, a PhD student in international relations at the University of Sussex in Brighton, left for Istanbul two weeks ago.

Mr Nisancioglu, whose parents are from the capital Ankara, told the Advertiser: "Under the ruling AKP, Turkey is subject to an unfortunate mixture of inequality and authoritarianism."

"Restrictions in freedom of speech, disrespect for civil liberties, eroding labour rights and mass privatisations of public services are among the reasons I feel there is a need for change."

"Seeing thousands of people protesting in spite of brutal police violence was massively inspiring. Some friends in Istanbul took part and were relaying stories of the solidarity among protesters. Out of a mixture of jealousy and empathy I felt I had to be there."

Mr Nisancioglu, a former pupil at Latymer School, in Haselbury Road, Edmonton, rubbished Mr Erdogan's claims that the protests are the actions of marginal groups and extremists.

"It is a mass urban movement," he said, "although probably not quite on the scale of what we saw in Egypt two years ago just yet."

"There are people from a mind-boggling variety of political identities – Kemalists, Kurds, Alevis, Sunni Muslims, environmentalists, activists, students, football fans, trade unionists, liberals and Muslim socialists. But a survey of protesters found that 79 per cent were not part of a political party or association."

Enfield councillor Yusuf Cicek, who represents Turkey Street ward, was born in Turkey and told the Advertiser: "The people involved are everyone and anyone suffering under this undemocratic government. It's not a specific group that is behind it. A wide range of ethnic minorities and people with differing beliefs are involved – Christians, Alevis, Kurds, Muslims – all with differing political views."

"The protests have got bigger and bigger and spread, and I hope they will lead to greater democracy. I don't think they will stop until there is a positive reaction from government."

The government maintains a heavy-handed approach. Mr Nisancioglu said: "On June 15, I was in Gezi Park when the police evicted the camp and was heavily tear-gassed, both then and later in Harbiye, in the city centre."

"There were water cannons with the water laced with tear gas, too, and apparently rubber bullets being used, but thankfully I avoided those. On Monday last week, following a trade union demonstration I was tear-gassed and shot at with a water cannon again.

"AKP militias are a real concern. Last Monday, an armed gang was marching through the streets chanting the prime minister's name. The police have largely turned a blind eye to this."

As in their home country, Turks in London are divided – but, according to Mr Nisancioglu, Turkish politics will never be the same.

"People have found strength and a voice," he added. "They are no longer willing to passively accept the situation they are in. They now know they are capable of speaking out and capable of taking it upon themselves to change society for the better."

"It may be due to my own proximity to events, but it feels as though the authoritarianism that has historically been a prevalent part of Turkish politics cannot continue."

Che taps in for award triumph

WHEN you're recognised alongside the likes of Amazon, Samsung and John Lewis, you know you're on to a winning formula.

For Che Richards, this is exactly what happened when his heating and plumbing company flushed away the competition at this year's Which? Awards.

The consumer magazine awarded Che, 41, of Horseshoe Lane, Enfield, the Local Business of the Year gong after his firm The Hampstead & Highgate Heating and Plumbing Company received more than 50 recommendations.

He was announced the winner by TV personality Natasha Kaplinsky and the review company's chief executive Peter Vicary-Smith at a glitzy award ceremony in London on Wednesday last week.

"When my company was announced, I almost fainted," Che told the Advertiser. "I was bowled over. I didn't even have a speech prepared."

"It's very touching that customers would go out of their way to leave a good review on the Which? website," he added.

His proud dad Paul Meek, 65, who founded the company in 1981 attended last week's bash and when Che collected his award he used his speech, in front of leading businessmen, as an opportunity to thank him.

Che had been shortlisted along with nine other firms who won UK regional awards for "phenomenal" feedback from customers.

"When I won the regional award for London, I thought it was someone pulling my leg," he said. "I was pretty chuffed just winning that award, to be honest."

He took over the company in 2011 after his dad retired and now he is looking at ways to expand the business while staying true to the values that have earned him the award.

Mr Vicary-Smith added: "In these tough economic times it's fantastic there are companies who still go the extra mile for their customers to provide good quality service and value for money products."

Jobs project is bowled over by cricket match

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

NICK de Bois stormed to victory on the cricket field with a team of young players in a contest that raised more than £10,000 between the overs.

The match in aid of Skills for Life: Making a Difference, a new scheme aiming to help the borough's 2,500 jobless youngsters find work, saw Mr de Bois and fellow Tory MP David Burrowes pitted against each other on Friday in a battle for sporting success.

Although rain threatened play at the start, the MPs and their teams of young players from Holtwhites Cricket Club, in Holtwhites Hill, Enfield, helped to raise £10,908 for the initiative, along with a barbecue and raffle with prizes ranging from tickets to Spurs and Arsenal football matches to Accurist watches.

Undaunted by his loss at the hands of his Enfield North counterpart, Mr Burrowes, MP for Enfield Southgate, took up the gavel and auctioned off a raft of luxury items including tea for two at the House of Commons and cricket bats and shirts signed by players from Middlesex County Cricket Club.

The money raised will be poured into the venture which aims to pair experienced mentors from the community with jobless youngsters in a bid to curb the spiralling youth unemployment figures in the borough.

The scheme's founder Vijay Sujan told the Advertiser: "The event was a tremendous success. It is so very important that we help these unemployed young people and it is gratifying to get such overwhelming support. We see the involvement of the Over-50s Forum as a crucial element in ensuring that this project comes to fruition and achieves our aims."

OPINION

Michael Lavender

Enfield Conservative group leader

Radical decisions will have to be made once the coffers are empty

THE criticism levelled at Enfield Council is its focus on managing next week's news rather than its willingness to tackle important issues in a timely fashion.

It seems content to firefight and blame third parties, typically the government.

Delays in decision-making have seen proposed regeneration schemes in Ponders End and Upper Edmonton stalled and the redevelopment of housing sites delayed – witness the empty sites in Parsonage Lane, Lancaster Road and Forty Hill.

Last-minute schemes have been rushed through to increase the size of primary schools on existing sites with the result that parental choice, car parking and road safety considerations risk being compromised.

Most residents would not yet be aware of these matters.

However, the delays in making tough decisions is now evidenced by the fact that the council is the seventh worst planning authority in the country and the worst in London, with only one in eight of major planning applications being determined within the statutorily prescribed period, thereby impeding regeneration.

As a consequence the council faces being put into special measures. Somehow I don't expect to see that celebrated on the front page of Our Enfield, a publication that is intended, at taxpayers' expense, to promote the Labour executive as much as the council itself.

By 2014, the financial reserves that were inherited in 2010, £95million according to the Labour Party at the last election, will have been used without being replaced, while borrowing has been increased towards statutory limits and necessary cost savings have not been identified or implemented.

The council is a carbon copy of the previous national Labour government. In 2014, the coffers will be bare and radical choices, some of which could have been avoided, will then have to be made, but don't expect them to be trumpeted in party manifestos.

THE Sunday before last was Father's Day. We ate at fishchips@... – where I discovered that the "common" skate is anything but and hence was off the menu, "greyed out" to make the point.

Discrete posters explained the facts to diners interested in finding out more. Further research revealed that skate is, indeed, critically endangered, but I was pleased to discover that the stock of cod, once threatened, is now healthy and being harvested sustainably – a victory for campaigners, marine conservationists, regulation and consumers.

Similarly, it appears that following pressure on the Secretary of State for Education Michael Gove regarding the omission of climate change from the national curriculum, the study of the evidence for man-made climate change is included in the new GCSE, currently under consultation.

I was reassured to find that in his deliberations this time the secretary of state had consulted with an eminent professor of science education. It shows. Hence, in two cases at least, people power has worked.

I have written before about using purchasing power to exert influence, relying either on avoiding companies that are unethical in purchasing and sourcing their products or deliberately favouring outfits that operate sustainably.

Consumers are helped by certification such as Fair Trade – but we rarely have sufficient objective information, a branding of some sort, to guide our choices.

We could follow the lead of the Boy Scouts of America who are, this summer, introducing a sustainability merit badge that requires Eagle Scouts to "take responsibility for balancing long-term environmental, social, health and economic needs with progress and development" – hence ensuring, they say, that development, while meeting the needs of the present, should not compromise the ability of future generations to meet their needs.

If I knew which enterprises locally had earned such a badge of merit, I'd certainly shop there. So too, I expect, would you.

A PHARMACIST has scooped a top prize from his peers for achieving excellence.

Terry Reid, 53, who runs Reids Pharmacy, in Cambridge Terrace, Bury Street West, Edmonton, picked up the award at a ceremony in Sutton Coldfield, in the West Midlands.

The award was given by Alpha Pharmacy, a network of independent pharmacists with more than 4,500 members across six countries including the UK, France and Spain.

Now Mr Reid will be entered into a national competition with the chance of winning a cheque for £5,000 and an all-expenses-paid trip to Europe.

"I was astounded," he said. "The first thing I did was text my team at the pharmacy. I have a first-class team and we always stick to high quality customer service."

"We have a passion to do our best and provide warm and friendly service."

Mr Reid opened his business 25 years ago after beginning his pharmaceutical career with a leading high-street chemist.

He says he now works a challenging but very satisfying 75 to 80 hours a week, starting each day at 6am. Young people also play a leading part in the pharmacy with Mr Reid giving future medical students the chance to gain work experience.

"We are keen on helping young people," he added. "We have got two members of staff who have just finished their A-levels and will be in medical school next year."

"We have also got two people on work experience. We make sure to give them goals to achieve."

The pharmacy will soon be celebrating its 25th anniversary and will roll out new services including a travel clinic at which visitors will be able to receive free travel and health advice.

Wake up to what's going on around you

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

IN a bid to break people out of their gadget-powered commuting bubble, trees on one busy road are calling on us to look up and smell the summer.

As part of the AP and Beyond Arts and Music Festival, computer programmer Kevin Smith and his artist partner Zaza Smith, ably assisted by their two daughters, have created an art installation along Maidstone Road, New Southgate, where the family live, with posters pinned to the trees telling passers-by what they really think of the humans that scurry past them on their rat run to work.

"Walking and texting: how awkward!" screams one poster pinned to a tree with another proclaiming plaintively: "I'm a Londoner, too."

Kevin and his family came up with the idea after seeing people trudge along the same road to Bounds Green Underground station, day after day, seemingly oblivious to the nature that surrounds them.

"We take so much of our environment for granted and so the purpose of this installation was to make people aware of their surroundings for a change," said the father-of-two.

"The idea for this installation was really to provide a way for people to break out of their daily routine for a moment, throw away their troubles and see their world in a slightly different way."

Admitting that the speaking trees have caused something of a stir on the street, he told the Advertiser that streams of people have approached him, asking him what it all means.

"I like when people give me their own explanation," he said.

Poster boys and girls: Kevin and Zaza Smith, along with their children Jamila, 12, and Aisha, nine, have decorated the trees in their street in New Southgate tions," he said. "People have been excited by it and some people have volunteered their own explanation for it and what is brilliant is that a lot of the time the people who are most excited by it are not people you would expect to be traditional gallery goers."

The installation will be taken down this week but photographs of the trees' poster speech bubbles can be seen at: www.bowesandbounds.org/forum/topics/public-art-for-maidstone-road-n11?xg_source=activity

Copper thieves hit changing rooms at recreation ground

THIEVES have stripped thousands of pounds worth of copper from a sports ground's changing rooms, forcing sportsmen and women in the borough to get their kit off in the open air.

Looters who ransacked the Church Street Recreation Ground, in Great Cambridge Road, Edmonton, on Tuesday last week made off with a copper water tank, metal piping and fittings that will cost Enfield Council £6,000 to replace.

A furious Chris Bond, cabinet member for environment, has slammed the smash-and-grab antics of the robbers who have left users of the football pitches, tennis courts and cricket ground with nowhere to change before and after matches.

"Metal theft is a massive problem for Enfield," Mr Bond admitted. "It means we have to spend significant sums repairing the damage caused by the theft and in this case means community facilities are out of action."

Parade pays tribute to armed forces

VETERANS, servicemen and cadets will be marching through Enfield Town on Sunday to mark Armed Forces Day.

The parade, organised by the Enfield branch of the Royal British Legion, will honour soldiers past and present and those who have made the ultimate sacrifice for their country.

The march will be led by the Caledonian Pipers Band and will include current serving personnel and veterans as well as Navy and RAF cadets.

The parade will start in Trinity Street at 11.45am and march along Chase Side, through Church Street and on to Silver Street, where it will stop for a salute to dignitaries and the raising of the Armed Forces Day flag at noon.

The parade will then return to the Royal British Legion branch in Holtwhites Hill for a small buffet.

Chairman of the legion branch Brendon Farrell said the day is a celebration of the work of the armed forces. "It's to support the veterans who have fought and show they have not been forgotten, and also support the lads who are fighting for us now."

"Before in the wars we were fighting for England but in these times it's to keep the peace in other countries as well."

Enfield Council is signing the Armed Forces Community Covenant today, alongside representatives of the NHS, police, armed forces and charities.

The covenant highlights the council's commitment to supporting veterans and servicemen and women.

Council leader Doug Taylor said: "For this year's Armed Forces Day Parade, I once again want to remember and thank all those involved in our armed forces, be they currently serving, veterans, or cadets who are just starting their career."

"We must also honour those who have lost their lives so bravely in the defence of our freedom."

FAMILY ANNOUNCEMENTS

Wartime sweethearts mark 65 years of happy marriage

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

WARTIME sweethearts who have just celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary credit their long and happy marriage to the deep love they have kept alive throughout the years.

Great-grandparents Des, 89, and Beryl Woodhall, 87, of Branscombe Gardens, Winchmore Hill, first met in the youth club of the Trinity at Bowes Church, in Palmerston Road, Palmers Green, 71 years ago when Beryl was 16-years-old and Des was 17.

As World War II raged, Des volunteered for the RAF and was dispatched to South Africa to learn to fly Lancaster bombers.

Although the couple were separated by continents and oceans, their love letters sent back and forth throughout the war kept their romance alive.

Once he was demobbed and returned to civvy street, Des proposed to his wartime love on her 21st birthday in 1947.

They were married on June 12 1948 in the church where they had first met, six years before.

Asked what the secret to his long and happy marriage, the former magistrate replied: "A deep love and affection for each other and a mutual respect."

The father-of-three and grandfather-of-eight added that a celebration lunch in the George IV pub, in Great Amwell, near Ware, Hertfordshire, with the whole family in attendance had been "absolutely gorgeous".

"We have been very lucky to have been blessed with such a wonderful family," he added.

And although the couple asked the family not to get them presents for their big day, Des admitted that their anniversary had been made all the more special by the arrival of their first great-grandchild, Eloise Atwood, who was born just 12 weeks ago.

Happy anniversary: Beryl and Des Woodhall have celebrated 65 years of marriage

Come rain or shine – this Hamlet is in his element

IT IS that time of year again when we might catch a glimpse of sunshine, so what better way to enjoy a long summer evening than by watching an open-air theatre production in all its glory.

The award-winning Principal Theatre Company, based in Southgate, is putting on an impressive 13th year of open-air performances of Shakespeare classics.

This year it is the turn of the Bard's shortest play, Comedy of Errors, and his longest, Hamlet.

Staging Hamlet in the beautiful grounds of Capel Manor, in Bullsmoor Lane, Enfield, was a small and intimate affair with only a few props of worn furniture and a series of gazebos behind to hide the performers as they changed.

Set among a rural aristocratic family, rather than the Danish monarchy, the script is cut to a manageable two-and-a-quarter hours – and a great warm-up was provided by thigh-slapping folk songs from members of the troop as the audience took their seats.

At this stage drops of rain began to fall from ominously black clouds. But everyone takes it in their stride – the audience were prepared with umbrellas, blankets and even an emergency cagoule.

And as if the theatre gods were looking down on us, the dark clouds broke and gave way to a blue evening sky as the play began with those immortal lines of Prince Hamlet, played by David Mildon: "To be or not to be."

Principal man: Director Paul Gladwin is playing Claudius in his theatre company's production of Hamlet

Mildon shines and takes us on an emotional journey from beginning to end. The moment Hamlet sees the ghost of his dead father is a highlight. The atmosphere created by the on-stage sound effects is enough to give you the shivers.

King Claudius is performed by the company's director and founder Paul Gladwin, who subtly allows the audience to ponder the motives of both Hamlet and Claudius.

Emily Mae Winters and Denis Grindel also put in strong performances as siblings Ophelia and Laertes. Winters is captivated as the grief-stricken Ophelia, mourning the death of her father while singing haunting songs and playing the guitar.

The final scene with Hamlet and Laertes locked in a duel is action-packed and their fencing jabs are timed to near-perfection as the play comes to its tragic conclusion.

Not to be missed – pack a picnic, pop in a bottle of Prosecco and sit back and enjoy a wonderful evening, whatever the weatherman says.

Plate of paella not what it was cracked up to be

Restaurant News
La Vina Tapas Bar,
Wightman Road, Harringay
020 8340 5400
Open 5pm-midnight
seven days a week

AS Gourmet Gannet and I took up our perch deep in the candlelit recesses of La Vina Spanish restaurant, with a sinking feeling, I realised within minutes that my greedy ways would not be satiated by the tiny tapas dishes that were flying past our noses.

For a Greedy Gannet like myself, nothing fills me with a deep dread quite like the prospect of minuscule "sharing" platters that I firmly believe are overpriced appetisers masquerading as meals.

To avoid the bad temper an empty purse and an empty stomach bring on, I managed to convince Gourmet to share a proper, industrial-sized

Leaving more than a little to be desired: La Vina in Harringay paella with me and just use the tiny tapas portions as starters to the main event.

Having arrived at the restaurant ravenous (rookie mistake at a tapas bar, I know), I was salivating at the thought of a plate of Paella Con Pescado (£10.50 each), groaning with fresh shell-on seafood.

So when an anaemic-looking shallow plate of claggy rice arrived with a handful of rubbery squid thrown into it, I was so disappointed I had to order another glass of wine to console myself.

Coming as it did after our starters of flavourless plastic pale cheese called Queso Manchego (£4.95), Fabada Asturiana (£4.95), a tiny dish of nondescript chorizo swimming in a watery weak tomato sauce with what tasted distinctly like baked beans, and Codornices Asados (£7.25), a bony, dry quail, I was too disheartened to bother glancing at the dessert menu, even though I was still so hungry I was seriously contemplating a pit stop at one of Green Lanes' finest kebab emporiums on my way home.

If this meal had come in at under £45, I would have been perfectly happy with the mediocre offerings – but the fact that the cost of three tapas dishes and a paella between two, plus drinks, totalled £56 meant that I left La Vina feeling not nearly full or drunk enough to justify parting with that amount of cash in an area heaving with better quality, cheaper restaurants.

In fairness to the restaurant, they do offer better value midweek deals, but if you're on the hunt for a reasonably priced weekend feast, I would be tempted to give this particular restaurant quite a wide berth.

Many ways to bid at Lanes Network Auctions July auction

2013 has seen Lanes Network Auctions achieve impressive sales rates of 82% (well above the national average of 78% (source EIG)), a clear sign that their mix of local expertise and marketing coupled with national promotion and a Central London held auction is generating great results.

Their most recent auction in May saw the successful introduction of online bidding and that service will operate at the July, and all future sales. It also saw record numbers of legal packs being downloaded prior to the day.

The ability of potential buyers to bid in person at the Central London auction room or by phone, by proxy or online, greatly increases the opportunity for a sale at an excellent price.

The auction to be held at the Glaziers Hall by the River Thames at London Bridge on July 3rd has an interesting selection of lots and seller clients include lenders in possession, local authorities, executors, private sellers, PLC's and asset managers.

Lots include:

Warren Farm (pictured right): A rare opportunity to acquire a freehold farm of 34.8 acres with a 4 bedroom farmhouse and equestrian outbuildings. Lifestyle / development opportunity. The price guide is £550,000-£600,000.

Central London: Prime residential investments in Camden and Fulham.

Freehold vacant pubs: In Stafford and Eastbourne.

It is Lanes Network Auctions' expertise and local knowledge that creates the opportunity for clients to enjoy a successful sale. This combination of national, local and regional marketing, coupled with good quality advice on guide prices and reserves, makes for a positive outcome.

Excellent exposure to the market is crucial and auction catalogues and newsletters are distributed to many thousands of investors, potential buyers and property people. In addition, social media is an important marketing channel and Network Auctions are on Facebook as Network Auctions and on Twitter as @NetworkAuctions. Over 2200 individuals and businesses follow them on a daily basis.

All auctions are video streamed live to the Network Auctions website and the results tweeted directly from the auction room. Over 350 people regularly watch the auctions live via the video service.

To discuss your requirements and the best options for any property you are considering selling, please contact Paul Lincoln of Lanes Network Auctions on 0208 8042 253 or by email at paul.lincoln@lanes-sales.co.uk or via their website at www.lanesproperty.co.uk

In this rapidly moving technological age people are finding new ways to advertise, especially online via the internet. But contrary to what online sites are saying and common assumptions, print advertising is not dead. There are still benefits and disadvantages to both methods and the best way to succeed is to find a vehicle that covers both bases - and that's where we come in!

The Benefits of print advertising:

1. Print adverts last longer and will be seen often.
2. They will be seen by a large number of people and have the ability to hit a specific audience.
3. There is a more creative potential with print advertising.
4. There is a positive perception of newspaper advertising - it will encourage people to think the client is serious.

The Benefits of online advertising:

1. The advert content can be easily updated.
2. It's online 24/7, 12 months a year, all round the world.
3. A massive audience, with all ages now online.
4. Very quick response - you can be receiving candidates hours after posting your advert.

We'll give you the best of both worlds - every week, all week!

SIGURDSSON LOOKING TO MAKE FAST START

By Dominique Stafford

sport.enfield@nlhnews.co.uk

TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR midfielder Gylfi Sigurdsson has stressed the importance of getting off to a good start when the new Premier League campaign gets under way in August.

The past two years have seen Spurs struggle to pick up points in their first few matches – and this has ultimately proved costly as they have ended up narrowly missing out on Champions League qualification on both occasions.

The fixtures for next season were released last week, with Tottenham beginning at newly-promoted Crystal Palace on August 17, before hosting Swansea City on August 24 and making the short trip to bitter rivals Arsenal on August 31.

“It will be a difficult game at Crystal Palace,” Sigurdsson said. “It’s a London derby and Palace’s first match back in the Premier League.

“We need to get off to a good start to the season, so it’s important we get the three points and go from there. That first game is massive for us. We really want to get off to a positive start.

“We started slowly last season, drew a couple of games at home that we really should have won, and that cost us. We’re all determined to make a good start and pick up good points in the first few weeks.”

Although it is still the best part of two months until the season starts, head coach Andre Villas-Boas is already eagerly anticipating the chance to build on his encouraging first year in charge.

“I’m looking forward to next season,” he said. “I think that there will be big changes in every team and the managerial changes at Chelsea, Manchester City and Manchester United will see different ways of playing.

“Other teams will look to create strong sides and we will look to do the same, and build a strong, competitive team.

“At certain times of the season we have compact fixtures with the top teams again. November and

Looking to get off to a flier: Gylfi Sigurdsson is looking for Spurs to begin the new season with a bang

December is when we gathered many points last season and we will look to do the same again. This time we go to Old Trafford on New Year’s Day and that will be a huge game.”

Meanwhile, Tottenham have confirmed the appointment of former England assistant manager

Franco Baldini as their new technical director.

The Italian, Fabio Capello’s right-hand man when he was in charge of England, had been widely tipped to take up the role since leaving his post of general director of Serie A Club AS Roma.

“Franco is extremely well respected in the industry, possessing an extensive knowledge of players around the world,” said chairman Daniel Levy. “He will strengthen our football management team, particularly in the field of recruitment, working closely with Andre and Tim Sherwood across all levels of the playing side.”

Impressive Skolars overcome Rochdale

THE London Skolars produced one of their best performances of the season to beat Rochdale Hornets 32-16 on Sunday as they recorded their third successive win in rugby league’s Kingstone Press Championship One.

Lifted by their recent good results, the hosts controlled the match for long spells, while a much-improved defensive display saw them restrict their third-placed visitors to just three tries.

“For the past month our defence has been iffy, and we’ve worked as a squad to put that right,” said head coach Joe Mbu. “A lot of defence is about effort, and we really put that in during this match.”

The Skolars opened up a 10-0 lead courtesy of tries from James Anthony and Dylan Skee, the second of which was converted by Skee.

However, Rochdale hit back strongly and they had already gone close on several occasions before Jordan Case touched down twice in quick succession to get them back on level terms midway through the half.

The visitors then had a try ruled out for a forward pass, but the Skolars ended the first half on a high as Martyn Smith’s converted try saw them retake the lead.

With the wind in their favour in the second period, Skee kicked a penalty to increase the hosts’ advantage, before Andy McLean burst through a gap in the defence to cross the line.

Again the visitors responded as Martin Waring pounced on a loose ball to score a try which reduced their deficit to ten points with 14 minutes remaining.

The Skolars were not to be denied however, and Skee slotted over his second penalty of the afternoon before Joe Price touched down from the final play of the game to ensure that Rochdale missed out on a bonus point.

The London Skolars’ next match is at home to Gateshead Thunder on July 7.

Victory takes Hornsey out of drop zone

HORNSEY climbed out of the relegation zone in the top flight of the Middlesex County Cricket League after securing a comfortable 73-run win at home to Finchley on Saturday.

Michael Phillipson (49) and Basil Akram (41) laid an excellent platform for Hornsey before Jack Goldberg struck a crucial unbeaten 50 to take them up to a total of 246-9.

Jake Milton made 51 for Finchley in reply, but they fell away badly in the face of some stunning bowling from Phillipson (6-26) and were dismissed for 173.

Meanwhile, North Middlesex got their push for promotion from Division Two back on track by romping to a seven-wicket win at home to Harrow Town

Edward Bird took 5-44 as the visitors were dismissed for 100 batting first, and North Middlesex raced to 103-3 in less than 21 overs in reply.

Division Three action saw Highgate strengthen their grip on third place in the table by beating Indian Gymkhana by 79 runs.

After Highgate battled to 167-7 in difficult conditions – Carman Mapatuna top-scoring with 43 – the bowlers took centre stage as Indian Gymkhana collapsed to 53-8 before eventually being dismissed for 89. Tony Duckett (4-13), Craig Gourlay (3-25) and Freddie Barrass (3-42) shared the wickets between them.

But North London had to settle for a losing draw from their home match against Acton.

The visitors were dismissed for 199 batting first, but North London could only manage 162-8 in reply, with Ben Hocking – who earlier claimed five victims behind the stumps – making 46.

Hornsey go to Twickenham on Saturday, while North Middlesex visit Harrow St Mary’s, North London make the trip to Enfield and Highgate host Wembley.
